The preparation of close to 300 pages of print comprises an enormous task. It is one that owes significant debts to a range of individuals. In fact, so much of our own work on environmental noise has resulted from the acquisition of knowledge through collaborations and interactions with a wide range of people over the years. Thus, while merely acknowledging this fact seems entirely inadequate, it is nevertheless important to do so and to say that the manuscript you see before you has been strengthened with knowledge and advice imparted by others. While ultimately we accept that the limitations of the final text are our sole responsibility, it has nevertheless benefited hugely from more direct feedback from a number of colleagues. We thank Dr. Ciaran O'Reilly (KTH, Sweden) and Jeff Parnell (NSW Department of Planning and Infrastructure, Sydney, Australia) for providing valuable comments on Chapters 5 and 6, respectively, while Professor Bob Celmer (University of Hartford, USA) did the same for Chapter 2. We would also like to thank Dr. Vincent O'Malley (National Roads Authority, Ireland) for his general encouragement and advice throughout the process.

More informally, we would like to offer a special gratitude to Professor Henry Rice (Trinity College Dublin, Ireland). Henry is single-handedly responsible for our joint interest in environmental noise as a research area, and it is safe to say that this book would never have appeared were it not for his mentoring. Finally, we would like to thank our significant others – Jessica and Sheila – for supporting and indeed enduring our (seemingly endless) pursuit of the final product. We hope that what has resulted is something worthwhile.
